

Coconut Mountain Communications

Favorite Games

Balloon Stuff:

It's always good to keep balloons around. This was one of our favorite games.

Buy two of the biggest long underwear shirts from your local sporting goods outlet.

Have the kids blow up fifty to one hundred balloons. [Use the first kids to arrive to help with this chore]

Separate the kids into two groups (boys against the girls is usually fun).

Suggest they put the smallest kid on each team in one of the massive shirts.

Give the kids a set amount of time to stuff as many balloons into the shirt as possible.

Count the balloons using a thumb-tack to pop them.

Duct Tape Stickup:

Separate kids into two teams, hand each team a roll of duct tape, and have them tape a kid to a table in a set amount of time.

Stand the tables up to see if the kids stay stuck.

Prop the kids in a corner and pretend to start the lesson time. Oh, the whining.

Pie Face:

Fill pie pans with whipped cream. Place a sterilized Silver dollar in each one. Have the kids find the dollar without using hands or feet. Let them keep the dollar.

Baby Food Barf:

Buy four to six tiny bottles of baby food (make sure they're all the same size). Choose fairly good flavors like Banana, except for one. Add a real gagger flavor like Tapioca/meat. Put all the jars in a paper bag and set in the middle of the group.

Have an assistant play music while the kids pass a hat. When the music stops the kid holding the hat has to reach in the bag (without looking) and select a jar. With a clean spoon they must take a big swallow.

Play for as long as they want.